ban.Transforming the times: creating a more sustainable world. A sustainable society would be one where resources are conserved, left in the environment, where there is an end to exploitation and where people can live peacefully with each other and their surroundings. Few organisations have had the transformative intent of the NNHA, including the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, the Royal Society for the Protection of Ancient Landscapes and other conservation charities.
The National Trust, in comparison, is a multifaceted organisation with a long-term perspective, but it is not involved in advocacy.
However, the pressures on the environment have the potential to impact on all organisations, and the evidence is mounting that we must change our working practices if we want to avoid climate change. Without adopting a highly visible, long-term perspective, organisations will face a higher-than-ever risk of being outpaced.Q: What is wrong with this
